

Informative Jamaican Website Launched!

Have you ever tried to search online for something Jamaican, and end up with scores, hundreds, and even thousands of websites that are a total waste?

...I did. Sometimes we may be lucky just to find the term we are searching for and nothing more.

Yes, there are a few, but very few Jamaican sites that do quite a good job delivering top quality information. The JIS website and the two main newspapers' sites easily come to mind.

But generally speaking, many of the rest sometimes are yet to be desired- of course, it depends on what you are searching for. Some too, are merely blogs that capture bits and pieces of information, while others haunt you with irrelevant ads, pop-ups, and irritating banners.

This new website www.my-island-jamaica.com however, is a breath of fresh air! Designed and authored by a local Montegonian, it provides insightful information on various areas of Jamaica and Jamaican life in a very amiable and personable tone.

While it is tremendously helpful to visitors to the island, it is immensely versatile to students who are conducting research on our country, or anyone for that matter, who needs to learn a little more about the island.

You'll also find articles, maps and scores of pictures, as well as information on top attractions, Jamaican food, and famous Jamaicans.

The website, which ranks highly by Google, continues to generate high traffic from all over the world.

www.my-island-jamaica.com was designed and authored by Wellesley Gayle, a Manning's High and Northern Caribbean University graduate. He welcomes your comments and feedback on the site.
